Making the decision about whether or not to have plastic surgery can be difficult for anyone. As the physician I can offer education about the procedure, statistics and advice, but the kind of information a former patient can offer is tremendously valuable. Everyone has unique experiences (both good and bad) and a patient's perspective is always helpful. Being able to see the results of surgery is also very important, especially if they can see a figure or features that more resemble their own.

Please know that all body photos used specifically protect your identity by not including your face and if any unique jewelry is present it will be covered. I am not sure if I will include any facial photos on the website, but would like to use some in the office. If you have had any injectables or facial procedures I would love to have your input about the use of these photos in the office or the website.
